

HAIR

The project is a Hair Series about women. It is an observation of women expressing who they are through their hair and how cultural, religious or personal context influence their choices. This work started when I shaved my head in 2017 and started to observe the reactions around me. I had never done anything so liberating and I felt it was the first time I was taking an entirely personal decision about my appearance and it was about who I was. I realized after I did it, that I was ready to put at risk what people considers femininity. Others saw it as an act of courage and even resistance.

I started to shoot young women who were freely expressing their personality through their hair style.
