PROPIO

A project to talk about the body, the scars left by pregnancy, how the skin looks after postpartum and how this topic is not spoken out loud.

Having made the decision to tie my tubes this year (2019), as a personal decision for not wanting to bring more children to this world so full of inequality, it meant asking me a lot of questions about sexual, reproductive and body rights.

To start talking about these issues that cause me so many questions, I decided to start with what I knew, showing female bodies that live postpartum in a real way. And by real I mean what we all live outside of magazines and television, where there are scars, new folds and changes to the hair.

That is why it is important for me to start talking about the body in all its forms and stages, so that we can all feel identified with what we see in the media.
