

Modern Obsession

Smart phones have given us the possibility to contact people on the other side of the world while we forget about the people around us by overusing them. We hit the like button under the picture of a flower in a café while we pass by a park full of flowers and don't even take a look at it. Smart phones are contradictory phenomenon in the contemporary world: On the one hand they help us to get closer to the far objects and on the other hand we get far from our surrounding objects. As if we are invisible in this world, and visible in the other world which is the virtual world.