

From the project "On Being Woman" - a series of portraits depicting women of all ages, exploring the multifaceted energy of a woman, free of labels such as wife, daughter, mother, sister, I tried to photograph the essence of a woman - the sum of all the ancestors that made her who she is today, strong, vulnerable, passionate, funny, all encompassing the word "woman". Photographed with no special effects and in natural light. Process done in camera and in one frame. Turned to black and white, adjusted levels and curves in Photoshop. This project took 7 months of full time work, and the willingness of over 50 women to explore their energy.
