Château Rouge by Sandrine Laure Dippa

« Château Rouge is a celebration of African culture in Paris. Nestled between Montmartre and the Goutte d'Or, this district has been home for several decades to the largest African market in the capital. Beauty creams, exotic foods, colourful fabrics - this is where the African diaspora come to refuel every weekend. As a child, I would accompany my mother as she made her way between the stalls. The fruits and vegetables, both foreign and familiar, fascinated me. This series is an ode to the dishes found in Château Rouge, and a way to remember the essence of a neighbourhood that is now threatened by gentrification. »
